01

Research and framing

The tension is uncertainty, not only price: people hand over personal information before they can compare cost or understand the care.

Format note: Figma access was requested on September 17 and is still pending, so the flow and landing page are delivered as this interactive page plus PDF and PNG exports. Frames will be ported into the Figma style guide once access is granted.

Research confidence: a heuristic review of the live flow to the account gate, the public landing page, the brief, and the One Pager. Screens behind the gate are inferred and labelled. No user research was run, so the persona is a proto-persona.

Observed friction

Urgency arrives before value

A limited-time discount appears after one goal question, before trust or clinical fit is established.

Observed friction

Pricing hides behind an account wall

Account creation is required before anyone can see pricing or compare the offer.

Prompt gap

Longer terms add mental math

Larger prepaid totals need monthly equivalents and a named comparison basis.

Design opportunity

Progressive disclosure

Explain care first, ask only what matters, show plans before asking for an account.

Design opportunity

One comparison language

Same price anatomy on every card: term, total, monthly equivalent, renewal, savings.

Design opportunity

Keep financing honest

Offer Affirm as an optional path without inventing APR or approval claims.

Goals

A multi-select question asks what the person hopes to accomplish.

Limited-time offer

$96 off the first month beside a sale end date, seen September 16. The exercise pricing implies an $86 discount.

Account gate

Apple, Google, or email signup is required before pricing and payment are reached.

Behind the gate INFERRED

Eligibility, intake, then a single monthly plan at checkout.

The person behind the funnel

A cautious comparator: motivated enough to click an ad, still weighing credibility, cost, and commitment.

Proto-persona

The cautious comparator

Goal-oriented, price-aware, and wary of hidden fees. They want clinical support but may not yet know which treatment is appropriate.

“Show me what I get, what I pay today, and what happens next. Then I can decide.”

Trust before commitment

Clear clinical process and eligibility language before any medication expectations.

Cost without decoding

Total due, renewal timing, effective monthly cost, and exact savings should scan in seconds.

A commitment that fits

Monthly flexibility, quarterly balance, or six-month value, with no term pushed as right for everyone.

A human path forward

Ongoing support from a care team needs to feel concrete, not buried as fine print.

Earn the next step

Each screen answers a question before asking for more information.

Compare like with like

Use consistent price anatomy across every plan.

Recommend, do not pressure

A recommendation explains why and remains easy to change.

Separate care from hype

Use clinical eligibility language and avoid medication promises.

03

Redesigned onboarding

Goals first, eligibility before anyone invests time, one preference question that drives a visible recommendation, plans before the account, and the chosen plan carried through payment.

What would you like help with?

Choose any that matter to you. Your answers help us shape the next steps.

☒ Lose weight

☐ Explore GLP-1 options

☐ Build lasting habits

☐ Feel more active

A few basics, so we only show care you can get

Providers are licensed by state and eligibility depends on BMI, so we check before showing plans.

State
Select your state

Date of birth
MM / DD / YYYY

Height
5 ft 6 in

Weight
200 lb

✓ Providers are available in your state and your BMI of about 32 is in range. A licensed provider confirms eligibility after intake.

Screen 3 of 7

A few health questions

These help your provider rule out treatments that are not safe for you. Choose any that apply.

☐ Pregnant, breastfeeding, or planning pregnancy

☐ Type 1 diabetes

☐ History of pancreatitis

☐ Personal or family history of medullary thyroid cancer or MEN2

☐ History of an eating disorder

☒ None of these

Full medical history is collected in intake. These questions only stop plans being shown to someone who cannot safely be treated.

Screen 4 of 7

What matters most right now?

Pick one. It decides which plan we recommend next, and you can still choose any plan.

☐ Lower upfront cost

☐ Flexibility month to month

☐ Lower average monthly cost

☒ More time to build habits

Choose your membership

All plans include online intake, licensed provider review, and ongoing support from your care team.

Recommended: 3 months, because you chose “More time to build habits”. You can pick any plan.

$56 less than 3 months at $135

or 4 payments of $87.25 with Affirm*

6 months

$599

$99.83/month, billed every 6 months

$211 less than 6 months at $135

or 4 payments of $149.75 with Affirm*

If you stay	Monthly	3-month	6-month
3 months	$319	$349	$599
6 months	$724	$698	$599
12 months	$1,534	$1,396	$1,198

Savings compare each term with the $135 standard rate. The $49 offer applies to monthly only, so monthly is cheapest for a first term and prepaid plans win over 6 or 12 months. *Affirm split is illustrative; Affirm shows terms at checkout. Medication cost is outside the exercise pricing.

Questions people ask before they start

Do I qualify?

Eligibility depends on your state, age, BMI, and health history; a licensed provider makes the final call after intake.

What is the $49?

Your first month on the monthly plan, which then renews at $135. The 3- and 6-month plans are billed once per term.

Can I cancel? —

Yes, anytime before your next renewal date from account settings.

What if treatment is not right for me? —

Provider review happens before treatment starts; if care is not appropriate, you are refunded in full.

Is medication included in the price? —

Membership covers clinical care, provider review, and care team support. Any medication cost is shown before you pay.

Ready when you are.

Prescription products require an online consultation with a licensed healthcare provider, who determines whether a prescription is appropriate. Individual results vary. Availability varies by state.

05

Why the flow is structured this way

Trust and comprehension are treated as conversion inputs: each page has one job, and price language stays consistent from ad to checkout.

Land

Connect the ad promise to clinical support, process, and a visible plan range.

Measure: CTA engagement

Understand

Clarify what is included and how licensed provider review works.

Measure: qualified starts

Compare

Show all terms with the same price anatomy before asking for an account.

Measure: plan comprehension

Commit

Carry the choice into checkout and offer financing without unverified promises.

Measure: checkout completion

Move pricing before account creation

Reason: people evaluate the offer before giving personal information.

Risk to test: fewer early account captures for retargeting.

Confirm eligibility before showing plans

Reason: licensing and BMI decide whether care exists at all, so ask first.

Risk to test: early personal questions may lower continuation.

Say “Recommended for you” and show why

Reason: it follows the priority the person picked, not a “best value” claim.

Risk to test: any label may anchor; compare against none.

Quote savings against the $135 rate	Reason: the $49 offer makes monthly cheaper for a first term ($319 vs $349) and narrows the 6-month saving to $125.	Risk to test: price-aware users will do the math; consider a first-term credit on prepaid plans.
Keep total and monthly equivalent together	Reason: supports comparison while preserving the amount due.	Risk to test: the equivalent may read as an installment.
Add Affirm as an optional path	Reason: softens the heavier upfront cost of longer plans.	Risk to test: eligibility and APR language must come from Affirm.
Capture auto-renewal consent at checkout	Reason: renewal price and cadence sit beside the total with an explicit checkbox, as negative-option rules expect.	Risk to test: extra friction; compare against disclosure only.
State medication-price uncertainty	Reason: the brief prices membership, not medication.	Production need: confirm inclusions, renewals, refunds, and financing terms.

06

Measure and roll out

Three plan lengths change cash flow, refunds, and retention, not only conversion. The rollout has to prove pricing-first earns more paying members without a refund problem later.

Primary metric

Net revenue per landing visitor

Measured at 90 days, after refunds.
Secondary: paid conversion, plan mix with a target of 35% or more on 3- or 6-month terms, first-payment value, and Affirm take rate.

Guardrails

Any breach pauses rollout

Rollout pauses if paid conversion drops more than 10% relative, 14-day refunds rise more than 2 points, chargebacks pass 0.5%, or billing and cancellation contacts per 100 orders rise.

Experiments

Three tests, in order

1. Pricing-first against the current account-first flow, split by traffic source, two weeks or 1,000 first payments per arm. 2. “Recommended for you” label against none. 3. Affirm hints on prepaid plans only against all plans.

Open questions

Decisions needed before launch

Medication cost inside membership or not, the refund rule when a provider declines treatment, whether $49 applies only to monthly, today’s median monthly tenure, Affirm terms, and day-one state coverage.

What the three terms do for the business

Cash up front

A 6-month prepay collects $599 on day one against $49 on monthly, so acquisition cost is recovered at checkout.

Fewer churn moments

Monthly carries five renewal decisions in six months; a 6-month plan carries none. A monthly member who leaves after four payments is worth $454, a 6-month member $599.

Refund exposure

Prepay creates a refund liability and deferred revenue: $599 times the ineligible-after-payment rate times the prepaid share.

The intro offer sets the mix

The $49 first month makes monthly the cheapest first term, so the mix skews monthly unless prepaid plans earn it.
